THIS world is full
Of good advice,
Of fervent prayer,
And preaching nice;
But generous souls,
Who aid mankind,
Are scarce as gold,
And hard to find.

The Louisville Commercial says: Superintendent Galbraith, of Mason County, has begun the publication, in the local newspapers, of the condition of the schools visited by him on a plan which which we commend to such officers generally. The condition of the school house, with its furniture and surroundings, is described first; then the trustees are named, with the fact that they have or have not visited the schools; the teacher is named, with a reference to special methods employed in his or her work; the size of the school and regularity of attendance are given. If the patrons of the school manifest any special interest, or if the teacher reads a school journal, these facts are reported. The adoption of a general system of reports of this kind would render the officers, the teachers and the patrons of every many school districts ambitious to appear well in comparison with their neighbors. Besides, it would give many useful suggestions to some districts of improvements adopted in others. If there are to be better schools there must be more local pride in the schools. The plan outlined above seems to be a good one for encouraging local pride, and we are glad to learn that so many superintendents in Kentucky have adopted it.

PERSONALS.

Mrs. T. Forman and children returned home this morning.

Miss Mollie Day, who has been very sick, we are glad to say is better.

Mr. Poyntz Weedon, of Cincinnati, is spending a few days with his Maysville friends.

The Cincinnati Evening Post says: The sooner the prices of all things reach bottom the sooner will the paralysis begin to be removed. There is now a general letting down, and the best promise of a new movement. It will not come with a boom in prices. The workman will get even by lower cost of living. Lower cost of production will enable our manufacturers to gain more of the home market and to reduce the importations of manufactured goods. We shall probably see a pretty hard winter, but the promise is that the bottom will soon be reached, and that then will come better times.

School Notes.

DISTRICT NO. 12—WEST LIBERTY.

This school house is located three miles west of Maysville at the terminus of a new turnpike. The house and grounds present a dilapidated appearance from without, within the furniture is new, but the school is in a better condition. One panel of the door was gone, like the transom window above it, leaving the unclosed aperture for the play of wind, which was springing in through the twelve panes of the windows where the glass had been broken out. The trustees, William Robinson and S. G. Collins, have not visited the school. Of the patrons Mrs. William Tully, Mrs. William Clark and Henry Gray have visited the school. There are thirty-five pupils and on the roll forty-six, while the census report shows seventy-nine. Miss Howe is teaching the first term, and has been in the school in her work, has a professional library and takes an educational journal. She spent last summer in the National Normal Union, Lebanon, Ohio. She gives special prominence to letter and composition writing and uses the writers' guides, and an armistice, and history, geography and spelling. The little folks are required to prepare their spelling lessons in writing, if they are able to write script, in print. The discipline of the school is good and there is every indication of genuine progress on the part of the pupils.

DISTRICT NO. 13—MAYSVILLE.

There is no public house here so the trustees have rented rooms in the Old Fellows' building. These rooms and their furniture are good, but only too much crowded for the interest of the school. The trustees, Charles Wheeler, Walter Mathews and L. Longnecker, have been very attentive on the school, have not only visited but have been present at examinations. I nowhere found trustees doing their duty so well as here. The discipline of the school is good, but has been better in the past. The pupils of the school as shown by the census report are one hundred and fifty-four, by the roll one hundred and thirty-five, and by attendance one hundred and thirty-five. The teachers report favorably on the regularity of attendance. The patrons of the district are showing decided interest in the school and have voted a tax of 25 cents on the $100 for school purposes to be paid on the 1st of January. The best of the school is in the hands of Prof. Charles M. May, principal, and Miss Mary Arthur, assistant, are teaching their second term months. The school is in the hands of a teacher of great versatility of resources and we find in his school the successful use of both written and oral methods in the same class. His power, as I believe, consisting in a great measure in his ability to use that method best suited to a particular case or purpose. Miss Arthur is every way a faithful and painstaking teacher. I was impressed with this fact in her reading classes. She spares no time, labor or care in the discharge of her responsible duty. The teachers of this school require a written examination every quarter. These papers are read and graded and any one who believes school teaching is a play would do well to look over that accumulation of papers that would be handed in by one hundred or thirteen pupils in their branches. I examined many of these papers, and confess myself pleased with the ability and industry of the school. The papers are prepared and taken up in the school room, and are real tests, so far as they go. That the Maysville public school is successful there is no doubt, but the teachers have too much work to do as they would and find great difficulty in discipline or as Prof. May expresses the idea in professional parlance in tuning the school. There are more than a hundred pupils in two rooms, grades from a b c to V, the higher mathematics, etc. This is too much for two teachers, no matter what the accomplishments may be. But not the teachers, the trustees are to be blamed for this. We have good reasons to hope that this will be looked to at an early date. Another room will allow such classification and arrangement as the trustees may see fit to make on his career of success and usefulness. Let the trustees consider this matter at once.

We have, since writing the above, learned that the trustees are waiting the collection of the local tax by the Sheriff. So much depends on the prompt action of officials.

L. W. GALBRAITH.

The much needed rats have come at last. The farmers are doing gathering corn. Rev. E. C. Ware has just received a contract letting on the Kentucky Canal for a work pass.

Rev. E. C. Ware has been invited to fill the pulpit of Two Lock Church until they can get a permanent pastor.

Rev. A. M. Vardeman, of Maysville, assisted by Rev. E. C. Ware, has just closed a ten days meeting at the First Baptist Church in this city where there were ten altitudes, nine baptisms and one conversion. The church is a handsome one as the large crowds who hear him could witness.

CLEVELAND A STUBBORN MAN.

His Peculiarities Pleasantly Described.

(Letter to the Indianapolis Journal.)

"Unless I am greatly mistaken in human nature in general and in your Cleveland in particular, there will be a lot of people disappointed in Washington on the 4th of March," observed a brother of Secretary Foster the other day at the Congressional Committee. "I know Grover Cleveland personally and well, and if he rides in a carriage at the head of a procession from the Capitol to the White House after the inauguration I will be very much surprised. He is one of the plainest men I have ever known. I don't believe in any display in the first place, and he wouldn't want to be bored with such an affair if he did. No, he is not cranky; he is a plain man—that's all. About the Executive Mansion at Albany he lives like a farmer. I have often seen him around there. He always prefers walking from the depot to the Executive Mansion in returning home. He seldom rides anywhere about town. There are no secret qualities about him. Any and everything he does is done in all right, and he doesn't care to keep a secret, and so he makes it public if there are any circumstances connected with it calling for publicity. I was not surprised to hear the Maria Halpin story. I venture he never tried to cover that up. If he was a truly honest man, he had better have said so. He is not a hypocrite, and so he gave it all the latitude it wanted. He has no regard for his personal reputation. He simply does what he wants to, and lets the people put their own construction upon his purpose in doing it. That will be his line in the White House."

"Somebody says he is stubborn," I suggested.

"Well, if he isn't I never saw an obstinate man," laughingly replied Mr. Post. "He is said to do just the contrary to popular clamor, if he can find anything to justify him."

He won't make removals from office to gratify the party, then?"

"Not much. If a man wants him to leave his position, he had better not bother him much, and if a man wants an appointment, he would do well to make his request properly. He is not the man to make changes just for the novelty of having changes; neither would he remove a faithful officer, if he knew it, to appease clamor. He would however, remove an incompetent, and if he did his work well, and if he didn't work long."

"Industrious Grover, then?"

"Works more hours a day than any public officer I ever saw. He will be at his desk by 7 or 8 o'clock every morning and he gets up at 5 o'clock. He is not in his study at 6 o'clock in the evening, he will stay and complete his work. If he keeps him all night. This kind of work is not a general rule, but you will find him at the White House in July and August mopping the perspiration from his face, and at work. He won't let me make changes just for the novelty of having changes; neither would he remove a faithful officer, if he knew it, to appease clamor. He would however, remove an incompetent, and if he did his work well, and if he didn't work long."

"Exactly that I mean. He will go back to the days of Thomas Jefferson in his way he will conduct his work and himself. I predict there will be dissensions from service pretty frequently, and the ground assigned will be negligence of duty and not lack of ability. But, as I was about saying, he will disappoint the people when he is inaugurated. It is my impression of him that he will go to the Capital by some roundabout way, and as soon as the ceremony is over and he has said his little piece he will hurry to the White House. He won't ride in the gorgeous carriage driven in tandem, maple, as usual. I wouldn't be surprised to see him walk. If he does not, I think he will make a mistake. He is a plain man, and he is not to do so. Grover Cleveland knows little of public men or public life, except as he has read it. He has a horror for display, and he is a plain man when he is occupied of the White House."

Some of the recent broadsides are exceedingly artistic, both in design and workmanship. Nankin and blue is a stylish combination, a striped velvet and silk material, as well as those of wool.

Olive green, which we felt had almost disappeared for the winter, is shown in combination with yellow for evening wear.
